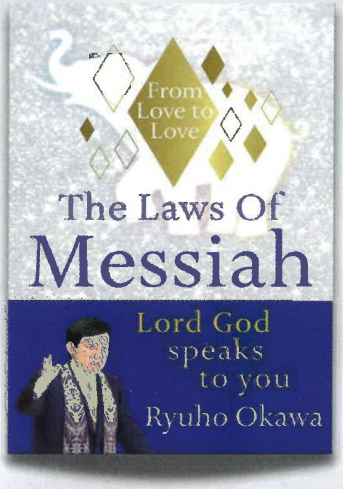
Now, here, ELOHIM is thinking about.



Establishing freedom and creating a society where people can make the right choice between good and evil.

In this booklet, as a gift, we share with you Chapter One of The Laws Of Messiah, which reveals God's teachings on ultimate, brief judgments on good and evil and the guidelines on the direction of how things should be in our society. The author is warning us that we are now living in the apocalyptic ages similar to Sodom and Gomorrah. If humankind continues to build a Godless society, we will face a series of crises that could reduce the whole population on this planet by 50%. To avert this worst-case scenario, we would like everyone to read this booklet, and also purchase The Laws Of Messiah, and gain a deeper understanding of God's Will and His Love for humanity. The last hope for humanity is El Cantare Belief.

When a Messiah appears, in most cases, his work will be to present and up hold the thoughts and ideas that have never been voiced before - or thoughts and ideas that are supported by only a small number of people - to create a great surge of movement by gaining supporters, and to overturn and correct the public opinion or value systems of the age.

Chapter 1

Now, here, Elohim is thinking about.

Good and Evil Taught by the God of the Earth

1. The Origin of Good and Evil on Earth

This chapter "Now, here, Elohim is thinking about." is based on the 77th lecture I gave in 2021. It is a somewhat unusual title and a difficult one.

In the fall of 2021, we released a film The Laws of the Universe-The Age of Elohim [executive producer and original story by Ryuho Okawa] as Part II of the movie series. But Elohim's teachings and thoughts cannot be fully conveyed by imagery alone, so here, I want to organize and share His basic way of thinking. I believe it will serve as a standard for how people today should think in the midst of worry and confusion.

As I wrote in my books, before humankind prospered on Earth, human-type beings lived on Venus when it was not as hot as it is today. Venus is now extremely hot and covered by gas, so it is not habitable by those beings anymore.

Six hundred million years ago, I decided that the next goal would be to establish human civilization on Earth. On Venus, I was called "El Miore," but when coming to Earth, I changed it to "El Cantare."

"El" basically means "God" or "the Light of God." "Cantare" contains the meaning to sing in Latin languages such as Italian and Spanish, but overall, El Cantare means "the Light of the Earth" or "the God of the Earth."

El Cantare began creating human beings on Earth about 600 million years ago, but it was about 330 million years ago when He first put out on earth a physical embodiment of His soul. The name was "Alpha." At Happy Science, I have already taught the Laws of Alpha and described His thoughts and work as the Creator (refer to The Laws of Alpha).

The second time El Cantare took on a physical embodiment, His name was "Elohim." "Alpha" and "Elohim" are the names on earth, but the real name is "El Cantare."

He has long guided humankind by the name "Elohim" since appearing on earth about 150 million years ago. So the name Elohim appears in the Old Testament. Some Muslims say that they sometimes say the name Elohim when they pray to Allah. An Uyghur woman who fled to Canada said this too. In an interview she gave when I lectured in Canada, she said, "Instead of saying Allah, we sometimes say Elohim when we pray." So, the name Elohim has been used for quite a long time.

And now, I am once again teaching the Laws for the new era and the foundations for building the next, long history of humankind under the name El Cantare. The teachings are on a vast range of topics, so I do not know how much of them will be passed on to future generations. But some people may want to know various things in detail, so I am giving teachings on a range of topics.

This chapter, "Now, here, Elohim is thinking about." focuses on Elohim, the second incarnation of El Cantare featured in the movie, The Laws of the Universe-The Age of Elohim, and the ideas He tried to teach as the basic way of thinking on Earth.

After Elohim's time, various teachings were taught in different countries by those who are called ethnic gods. But the contradictions in these teachings caused wars, discord, inequality, and discrimination. That is why I am here to tell you what the original teachings of the Lord God were.

"The Laws of Alpha" are the Laws of Creator. Alpha taught teachings that were full of hope, such as the purpose for which He gave humans physical bodies to live on earth and what kind of world humans should strive to create. He also taught that to promote evolution, He invited space people from other planets, who could adapt themselves to life on Earth, to live with the Earth-born human race.

The Laws during the age of Alpha, therefore, were about Creation and the co-existence of various life forms from the universe on Earth.

About 180 million years later, in the age of Elohim, the time came when it was necessary to make clear the distinction between good and evil on Earth.

At the time, hell was not a distinct and separate world as it is today. But discord and a sense of who was superior and who was inferior were already growing between people. And after leaving this world, a large number of people wanted to determine their way of life and status in the afterlife based on the values they had while alive on earth.

One of the goals for people on earth was certainly to create wonderful, idealistic societies and make this world a utopia. But this thought of creating ideal societies at times made people forget the original mission they had in the Spirit World. It made many people become attached to their earthly lives, believe that the third dimensional world is the real world, and lose interest in the other world.

Then they started wanting to differentiate themselves in the other world by the differences they had on earth: for example, by whether their position was high or low, whether they were wealthy or not, whether their skin was black, white, or yellow, or whether they were a man or a woman.

Before hell clearly came into existence, in the fourth dimension, people were starting to live separately; some lived in areas that were like higher grounds or hills, whereas others lived in areas that were like the inside of caves or the lower swamplands. Hell gradually began to fully form after this.

You will see this in our movie: about 120 million years ago, Lucifer, the twin brother of Michael, the leader of the Seven Archangels, was born under the name Satan. Lucifer grew jealous of God and was ultimately defeated by his brother, Michael. He said to himself, "Why is it wrong to be jealous of God? What's wrong with me becoming God?" Because he had been enjoying the feeling of being like God on earth, after he died and fell to the underworld, he made himself its overlord. He is the number one devil of hell.

Beneath him, there are many henchmen. What kind of people became devils after death? They were often evil kings or monarchs, religious leaders who led people astray, mistaken philosophers, and people with high status and influence who led many people in the wrong direction. These people are the origins of devils. Under the command of Lucifer, they have been conducting various wrongdoings to expand hell in many countries around the world over a long period of time.

2. The Difficulty of Judging Good and Evil Today When People Have Forgotten God's Laws

When a leader's thinking strays away from God's Will

When you live in this world, it is often hard to know what is good and what is evil.

For example, there are people who are admired for being in a profession that is highly respected in this world, for being from a good family, for being wealthy, or for their good looks. I also understand that there are singers and actors who are greatly admired in today's world. But among the people whom everyone approves of are those who are truly great in the eyes of God and those who are not. Even among the prime ministers of Japan, some return to heaven, whereas others end up in hell.

It is very hard for humanity to tell the difference. This is because people base their judgment not on the Laws of God but on man-made laws or on their own ways of thinking that they developed in this world. These man-made laws or ways of thinking are not always correct.

For the past 200 years, the mass media were expected to play the role of criticizing and, at times, attacking and knocking down bad leaders to prevent evil leaders from emerging. But their work is also a mixture of good and evil, as their judgment is based on the thinking of earthly common sense, knowledge, academic study, and science. So, if such earthly ways of thinking go wrong, the standards of good and evil that are produced by them can also go wrong.

For example, in a certain country, which I won't name, someone considered as the greatest journalist unfortunately fell down to a similar realm in hell as the very opponents he had been criticizing had gone to. So, it is not just angels fighting devils. There are also battles between devils, and this makes it even more difficult these days to tell good apart from evil. In this sense, we are at a very difficult point in time.

It is good that people have faith, pray to God, and think, "What humans create is not always perfect. We may think, 'We should create this kind of political system,' or 'We should create this kind of law,' but we must remember that above the political system and the law exists God or Buddha. Politicians and lawmakers must strive to work on behalf of God and create and enforce systems and laws that reflect God's Will." But this is not how things are today.

Today, democracy, parliamentary systems, political party systems, the rule of law, and other Western ideas of democracy are being accepted as universal values. Nevertheless, some of these values cannot be entirely accepted.

For example, under the rule of law, laws are made by majority vote. The voters are the representatives of the people in this world. So, if the worldly ideas are wrong, or if the majority of people do not pray to God, have wrong thoughts, think only about their interest, or make laws just to their advantage or to maintain their authority, then the laws themselves will have the power to turn this world into hell.

Sadly, neither can electoral democracy be considered a perfect system if the majority of people do not have faith or live in worldly temptations in a way that could make them come under the devil's persuasions.

On the other hand, suppose a single-party dictatorship or autocratic government controls its citizens by forcing on them the idea, "The decisions of the top leader are infallible like God's decisions." Problems can arise if the top leaders' ways of thinking stray away from God's Will. Such leaders can brainwash all their citizens into accepting only one way of thinking, even if the country has hundreds of millions of, or more than a billion, people. They can also grant the citizens freedom except for political matters, and they will not allow the citizens to criticize their leaders.

We see this in China, and we see this in North Korea. In Myanmar too, I think it will soon become impossible to criticize the current military leader. Even in a Buddhist country like Thailand, it is not allowed to criticize the king. This is not just inside the country but outside as well. If you criticize the king abroad, you will be arrested once you go into that country.

When those in power start to preserve themselves by believing that they have the same almighty power as God, then sadly, another hell can form in this world.

The dangers of totalitarianism by the rulers who deny God

I have talked about totalitarianism many times before. One of its characteristics is the tendency to resort to brutal revolution or to rule by violence. Totalitarian regimes take such measures as a matter of course.

They also like to use secret police. They have secret police to control people through different means. Today, these means include wiretapping, tailing, and monitoring with surveillance cameras.

What is more, they have concentration camps. Anyone who is politically inconvenient to them is thrown into a concentration camp, is confined there, and is isolated.

These leaders who deny God will fall to hell and be isolated in Abysmal Hell, where they will not be allowed to communicate with others. They are ideological criminals. If they see others, they will spread their views, so they are left alone in the pitch-black darkness. But in this world, they are the ones who throw their opponents into confinement and lock them up as political criminals in many places. Countries with these characteristics can be considered "totalitarian."

In addition to these, there is another point that should not be forgotten about totalitarian states. Usually, rebellions occur against rulers, but the totalitarian regime always tries to suppress and crush these rebellions. This is their natural reaction. People may imagine that peace will come and stable order will be restored once the rebellions are suppressed and eliminated, but these will never happen. I must make this very clear.

A far more frightening situation will come after the crackdown. It will be worse. Totalitarian states keep creating enemies. They make new enemies one after another. They continue making new enemies and take up a new fight, invade their lands, or destroy them. This is the frightening aspect of them.

Some people may think that revolution is unconditionally good, but I believe the purpose of a revolution should be the establishment of political freedom.

What is political freedom? It is politics that reflects the views of diverse people. It is achieved through discussions between people who are always pursuing "what is right." This is the kind of politics we need.

If more and more countries that have achieved a revolution suppress counter-revolutionary movements and send the protesters to concentration camps or even execute them, then that cannot be called a true revolution; that would instead be "state terrorism."

In particular, when violence becomes blindly permitted, it can lead to ideas such as "The maintenance of the state is the greatest good, and humans should serve the state. Those who defy the state are traitors, so it cannot be helped that they are suppressed." It is easy to arrive at such ideas because this is convenient for those in power. However, it is an extremely dangerous way of thinking.

To make it easier to understand, let me take Hong Kong as an example. Hong Kong is a very small place with only several million residents, but it was the world's third-best financial center. I say it in the past tense because it is now in the past; it "used to be" a financial center.

Economic prosperity cannot be achieved without freedom. When China began making Hong Kong the same as mainland China under the slogan "one country, one system," immediately there arose disorder, repression, and crackdowns on the opposition. This is wrong.

This can only mean that within the leadership in the Beijing government are people who do not understand economic principles. The Chinese Communist Party (CCP) has marked its centenary anniversary and lauds its achievements, but it is still unable to see the mistakes in the communist revolution.

I agree that a society where people are given equality and are freed from a sense of feudal-type hierarchy is a good society. In such a society, all kinds of opportunities and the freedom to succeed are available for all kinds of people. But if one-sided violence and suppression of people's rights and freedom are naturally accepted to achieve equal results for everyone, terrible unhappiness is spreading there.

My point is this: it is impossible to create a utopia by justifying jealousy.

A ruler may be able to make himself look good on the outside, but if he starts to "grind down" every successful person and thinks only about retaining his own power, then people must resist.

In a country, two million people were killed. In this country, intellectuals and those who studied abroad were massacred, and all that was left of them were bones. So, sometimes there are regimes that kill anyone who voices their opinion.

But when something is wrong, you must call it out, even from overseas. If a country dismisses such criticism from abroad as interference in internal affairs and puts their citizens under centralized control and surveillance, then this is an extremely dangerous situation.

3. Japan Must Plan for the Future and Say What Must Be Said

The 20th century was an age of wars and revolutions, but the 21st century could also see a fearful future of a different kind. So, now is the time to organize and correct our ways of thinking.

This is because the times have changed. With the development of computers, various tasks can now be processed very quickly. But if companies only focus on making a profit and think, "We just need to produce things that sell well and bring money," they could be doing wrong on a much larger scale.

For example, in mainland China, there is about one surveillance camera for every two citizens. But the parts used in these surveillance cameras are mostly made in Japan, so they are practically made by Japanese companies. These companies must consider how their products are ultimately used.

Certainly, it was good to have created jobs at factories for the Chinese citizens who had been living in poverty for a long time. It was good that they experienced economic growth.

But recently, the French government imposed sanctions on a Japanese company that makes its products in the Uyghur autonomous region, where people are forced into labor by the Chinese government. The company sells those products for its "low price, low margin, high volume" business. Meanwhile, the Japanese government continues to meander and evade the issue.

It may be difficult to separate politics and economy. But considering Japan's power and its influential voice to speak out on the world stage, it should clearly voice what is right and what is wrong.

It is good that foreign investment comes in and creates new jobs to realize many people's economic prosperity, but it should be done only under the condition that citizens are not subdued under violence, tormented, oppressed, or treated less than human. People must not be treated this way.

In the United States, during Abraham Lincoln's time, the Civil War broke out to protect property rights. In the South, black people were made to do the work of picking cotton and were not treated as human beings.

People in the South saw black people as part of their property that was necessary for developing their cotton plantations, so they fought the war. Abraham Lincoln did not want to have Americans fight each other, but he thought about what justice was and concluded that it was not right to enslave human beings perpetually, so he went to war. Over 610,000 people died in the war, but I think Lincoln is now the most famous god in America.

This shows that at times, you must say what must be said even if you suffer losses. Today, the totalitarianism of the Beijing government has completely repressed Hong Kong. They even froze the assets of a small newspaper company called Apple Daily, preventing it from printing. They did this brazenly while the world was watching, and they claim any criticism against it is interference in internal affairs.

If peace, order, and a safer world are established by making Hong Kong like the other regions under Beijing's rule, then I can understand what they are doing. But judging by the tendencies of totalitarianism, taking control of Hong Kong will make them want to go for Taiwan next. I'm sure it will happen. After that, they will want the Senkaku Islands, Okinawa, the islands and mainland of the Philippines, and Vietnam as well. To achieve that, Beijing already has the military regime in Myanmar under control. They are steadily laying the groundwork.

While knowing this, for example, the Biden administration was formed. They took office because democracy in the United States often sways like a pendulum, but after six months, they realized that they were mistaken and now admit that Mr. Trump was right. They are beginning to change their policies.

They used to dismiss what Mr. Trump said as "conspiracy theories." They accused him of making up the idea that he was conspired against. But now they regret it and are making decisions as the true America would. Even so, the United States did make a mistake and has regressed as a result.

I hope that from now on the United States will function as a healthy nation.

Unfortunately, the Japanese government has a similar problem. I sincerely hope that they stop implementing policies that give them credit only during their terms and adopt a more universal way of thinking, a way of thinking that they believe is right from the perspective of 10 years, 20 years, or even further ahead.

4. Realize the Dangers of Totalitarianism and Fight for Freedom in the 21st Century

Warning 1 During the coronavirus pandemic, Japan's policymakers learned they can restrict people's rights

Sandwiched between the United States and China, Japan is starting to show totalitarian tendencies. In the last one or two years, its policymakers have learned that they can restrict people's rights with just a single word from the top.

They can crush a certain business sector, issue a "stay at home" order, or prohibit people from moving across prefectures. For example, it's a little like martial law, but Tokyo entered a new "state of emergency" the day after I gave this lecture. So, my audience who traveled from Tokyo to Tochigi prefecture could be looked at coldly, as if they were coming to spread germs in Tochigi.

Once a politician gets used to wielding this kind of authority, it's hard for them to stop. It's one form of power. But it bears similarities to how the Beijing government thinks, so we must watch out.

We can accept what should be accepted within reason, but we must resist if this becomes the norm too easily and politicians begin to think they can do anything they want.

When Japan issued the third state of emergency, watching plays was allowed, but going to movie theaters in buildings with floor areas larger than 1,000 square meters (about 10,800 square feet) was not allowed. But when a couple of movie directors made a complaint, which was unusual for the Japanese, the restriction was lifted.

Obedience is one of the virtues of Japanese people, but if you find something is wrong, you must speak up. Don't stay silent and take it. If you think it is wrong, you should speak up and say, "Not a single coronavirus cluster infection occurred in movie theaters, so why should the movie showing be restricted?"

Right now, the government is oversupplying money and granting many subsidies just to get through these times. But if we're not careful, what will come next might be a great recession or a tragedy in certain industries. Even if people can get by for the time being, they might not be able to make it to the end.

But the worst is that humans hate other humans. People are beginning to hate each other. One of the principles of economy is that the economy develops when people buy products or use and receive services. But this principle is being shaken from its very core. It is beginning to seem like it is a good thing for humans to alienate each other and to dislike seeing each other.

At the time, there may be convenient things to make this happen, but there are things that should not be welcomed as convenient.

For example, when I gave this chapter's lecture, it was prohibited to hold an event at a venue with a capacity of more than 10,000 people. So I gave it at Grand Head Temple Shoshinkan and broadcasted it live via satellite. It's good that people can watch my lecture via satellite transmission, but if this situation continues, the government can possibly prevent particular groups from gathering. We need to be aware of this danger.

Warning 2 The rise of AI totalitarianism and surveillance capitalism

- The monitoring with cameras and drones conducted in China

Another change we are seeing since we entered the 21st century is the rise of what is called artificial intelligence (AI) totalitarianism. Not enough understanding and judgment have been made on this topic.

AI is processing massive amounts of data to make decisions for us. I said that in China, there is one surveillance camera for every two citizens. They also have drones in the air.

If, for example, someone is not wearing a mask, the drone can identify their face. The drone takes a photo of them, and then the arrest comes. And if they are taken away to a concentration camp somewhere, even their family members won't have any idea what happened to them. This is what can happen. This is a level at which the government has most probably crossed the line. It is highly likely that this counts as a human rights violation.

In terms of AI totalitarianism, I hesitate to say this because people working at AI-related companies are probably making profits, but we should not just be happy with this technology. It must not go so far as to violate human rights. We must know this.

- The power of mega-corporations to silence even the president of the United States

This is a similar term, but some people say that the age of "surveillance capitalism" has begun. This is not just about China. This can be seen in the United States, it is seen in Japan, it exists in China, and it is happening elsewhere. It is done by mega-corporations such as GAFA—Google, Apple, Facebook (Meta), Amazon.

These giant companies that command information across the world have huge convenience in an age like today, so they are profiting tremendously. Some areas have increased their tax revenues thanks to them. Companies such as GAFA can centrally control all their customers' information via electronic data, which is called "surveillance capitalism," and their appearance means that a new power has arisen.

The world is yet to make a judgment on this point from a larger perspective.

In a particular example, in the last U.S. presidential election, and even now, a certain company chose not to air the comments of the incumbent president or the former president. This means that the company has gained power similar to the legislative branch of the government.

To speak more clearly, when Mr. Trump was the sitting president, his Twitter account was suspended. He moved to Florida after his term in office, but Facebook (social media) decided to suspend his account for two years, basically until the end of the midterm election. This benefits a certain political party but not the others.

How this decision was made is not clear. Was it decided by the top executive after a company-wide consensus through discussions? Or was it decided by a mere chief-level staff member who was in charge? It is not clear who has the authority.

- My firsthand experience seeing free speech suppressed in Hong Kong

Some people say that China started to oppress Hong Kong just recently, but that's not true.

I have spoken about this before. I went to Hong Kong in 2011 and gave a lecture ("The Fact and The Truth") during a typhoon. The night before the lecture, I arrived at my hotel and saw the Happy Science animation movie, The Laws of Eternity [executive producer, Ryuho Okawa, 2006], aired on TV. This airing was perhaps arranged by our Hong Kong branch. While I was watching it, the moment it came to the scene of the Spirit World and its explanation, the screen suddenly blacked out. It didn't show anything after that.

That was in 2011, even before Xi Jinping took full power. The TV blacked out when the scene of the Spirit World came on. It was already happening in Hong Kong three years before the Umbrella Revolution. This is a characteristic of a totalitarian country, so we must be well aware of this.

I believe it's important to loathe and strongly reject a nation that controls information and does not allow its citizens to speak up unless they are loyal to the government.

Founding freedom and creating a society where people can make the right choice between good and evil.

'Why is the foundation of freedom essential? Freedom can give birth to evil, but utilizing freedom allows everyone to know what is good and bad and make the right choice—this is important.

Take clothes, for example. New styles are always coming out, but it is up to the people to try on different pieces and choose what looks good on them. Good products will sell more, whereas bad products will disappear. The same is true with comics; good ones will spread, whereas some bad ones should be weeded out.

Humans have given the freedom to decide it through competition in a free market. So, we must leave enough room for that.

Back in 1991, Happy Science got a little offended and protested in what we call "The Friday War." Happy Science religion had only just gained its legal status at the time, but a Japanese weekly magazine Friday used their power of publishing and reporting to severely and one-sidedly attack us out of their misunderstanding.

As I think about it now, I can say that there are sometimes truths in what gets reported in the weekly magazines or sports papers that are not generally highly regarded. For example, sports and evening papers run stories about UFO sightings, alien encounters, or people seeing ghosts, but major national newspapers hardly ever report such stories. Major national TV networks also rarely feature them. They report negative news and avoid anything that has to do with spiritual matters or extraterrestrial beings.

Is this right or wrong? I would say that it is not necessarily right.

In the United States, the Department of Defense issued a report on the 144 sightings of UFOs. It said one of them was a balloon, but the other 143 were still unclear. It said they could be unknown weapons from other countries but did not rule out the possibility of space people. It's a difficult matter to dig into.

The Japanese government is still empty-headed, avoiding weighing in, and it only echoes the news; but we at Happy Science have been disclosing this type of information. Existing authorities and institutions are unable to shed light on this unknown matter, and they tend to hide the truth. So, there are times when we must be resolute and fight.

5. Savior's Work Is Heavy in an Age of Eight Billion People

Humankind should have faith and listen to God's voice

People around the world have different ways of thinking depending on their religion or their legal system, so it is very hard to bring these different ways of thinking together. But it has been a part of Earth's history to accept this diversity to some extent, so I would like to continue doing so. I just want you to tell people around the world that the value judgment I am teaching should be the foundation of how to think.

I have been giving many important messages, but unfortunately, they are still not reaching enough people. I truly wish to somehow tell the Truth to many people.

I have already pointed out that many mistakes are being made by communist one-party dictatorships and autocracies, but Western-style democracy is beginning to show many dangerous traits, too. Moreover, in more and more countries, power is being seized through military coup d'états.

In places where violence is dominant, can people's voices triumph over guns? There is the saying, "The pen is mightier than the sword," but in reality, a sword is stronger than a pen and a gun is stronger than a sword. So, the future will be very harsh if you accept the ideas, "It's OK to use weapons and kill however many people if it is for the sake of a revolution" and "Control information, and it will be as if nothing happened."

In democratic societies, too, some places are becoming totalitarian; people are homogenizing their views on human rights issues and climate change issues. Here, too, I intend to say what must be said if I sense any danger.

Yes, there are differences between men and women. If people become too liberal regarding this issue, this world can turn into a difficult place to live in.

When El Cantare created human beings, He separated them into men and women. This is the policy on Earth. Some people are changing their views because people's sexes can now be artificially altered using biological or medical technology, but we also need to consider if it's the right choice from their soul's perspective.

Of course, human rights are important, but if people become too liberal, they too can fall into the hands of devils.

So, please have faith first.

Listen to God's words.

Please do not disregard the wisdom that humanity has accumulated over a long period of time.

Science and material prosperity can be accepted based on these, but this world is not the final home for human beings.

It is just a training ground for the soul.

Please remember this, and seek the wisdom to choose what is right from the diversity of values. It is also our work to preserve this Earth so that we can continue to use it for a long time as a training ground to refine such wisdom.

My work as Savior to correct humanity's mistaken ways of thinking

I know that the truth about the afterlife is not yet widely known, but I want the Happy Science teachings to reach every corner of the Earth. It is taking a while to do so, but we already have members in over 160 countries.

Our power will not be enough if it is only from Japan. If a seed is planted in your country, please make it sprout and bloom there. Spread it to tens of thousands, to hundreds of thousands, to millions of people, and help them grow.

There are things we cannot do as we wish. In India, for example, we have a lot of members, but it is very hard to build a center or facility that can connect everyone there. Transferring money from Japan, for example, is sometimes difficult. Each country has its own conditions.

So, I ask the people around the world to make the effort to do what they can to spread the teachings.
And in light of the information Happy Science puts out, if you find something wrong in the current politics and economy or in the work done by the mass media, make a change by voicing your opinion.
If you think something is wrong, say that it is wrong.
As for Japan, the prime minister has been hoping that the vaccines would solve everything and the Olympics would be a great success, but things are not going as he wishes. The struggle will continue.
But we must overcome these tough times. I will keep on fighting based on the principle of protecting the people with faith.

All of you, now, here, please listen.
Don't be defeated by coronavirus-related issues.
These come from materialism,
So, now we must have a strong mind.
Please spread this message.

Now, the world population is almost eight billion people.
If more than half of them, the majority,
Have wrong thoughts,
Or, in other words,
If they are trying to create a world without faith,
This will invite a repercussion.
So, before it happens,
I truly want to change humanity's way of thinking.
I believe this is the work of the Savior.

My work this time is heavy.
The world is large with so many countries.
Also, at a time like this when a virus is widespread,
We cannot travel freely.
But even so, come what may,
Our teachings must prevail through it and spread.
I believe so.
Please build up your life and work
With faith as your main pillar.
And spread to as many people as possible
The right way of living as human beings.

A novel by Ryuho Okawa

The Unknown Stigma

An unprecedented thriller mystery book of a girl involved in 3 mysterious murder cases in Japan. One was attempted by a Japan based US soldier, potentially making this into a diplomatic issue. As detectives try to crack this case, they get involved in supernatural phenomena. Can the modern day secular law bring justice to a paranormal crime case? And the story develops to the scale of international politics, a horrifying prediction on how America and the world can end under the current American administration.

Danger of Godless Society

Godless Democracy

Not aware of the "Creator" and its values of fundamental human rights will lack philosophy, resulting in a dangerous and extreme liberalism based solely on materialism and scientism.
Some elements of freedom can make people corrupt and decadent. Freedom of corruption can produce devils. So people who share Western values must have self-discipline and be responsible for society.

Bread and Circus Democracy

Filled with superficial appeasement policies to keep the people ignorant from the government's corruption and incompetence.

Can be Taken over by Mass-media Authoritarianism

What if the mass-media is not truth-driven but profit-driven?
What if they are trying to control the people through selective information?
Democracy will not function properly in such a society.

Totalitarianism

Calls free speech disinformation and is making a department of propaganda (disinformation governance board).

Socialism & Communism

Big government and redistribution of wealth will be the main economic policy, killing the heart of healthy capitalism and will destroy the economy.

All are against God's Will.

It can lead to the following dangerous paths
Godless democracy can lead to the following pitfalls.

Missionary Activities

Missionary work is an esssential aspect of Happy Science's activities. Founded on a care and passion to spread happiness to others, we invite our family members, friends and colleagues to the temple, special events and community activities. By sharing the teachings, we can help others learn about the Truth and solve their problems in life to become happy. We can learn from one another through wisdom sharing, to expand our light and love, and support one another in serving our community.

Happiness Planting

Happiness Planting is a precious aspect of Happy Science as part of our spiritual growth. It is the act of offering a financial donation that supports our activities and contributes to the happiness of others. It is not the amount that matters, but it is our attitude, purity of the heart, and the feeling of gratitude that we express when making a Happiness Planting offering.

Kigans (Ritual Prayer)

Ritual Prayers (known as 'Kigans' in Japanese) are sacred ceremonial prayers performed at local branches and temples. They are special opportunities to directly send our pledge to the higher dimensions of the heavenly world, to ask for their light and guidance to break through life's difficulties, and achieve your aspirations. There are various types of Ritual Prayers available, such as recovery from ill health, harmony in relationships, and success in work and life.
